

16 Aug 2012

The Weapons of Peace!

Offence and defence are nothing but two different sides of the same coin, called violence. In this cruel world, where all the possible types of destructive methods and technologies either already exist or are under research; there are some things that serve the purpose without any aggressiveness attached. In fact they are so silent in their action that the subject cannot recognise their threat.

This is absolutely not about the 'cold weapons' which don't involve gunpowder or heat in their impact. Neither is this about any advanced technology like biochemical weapons that can silently kill. These are indeed the weapons that don't even have their physical form and still manage to make maximum impact with the help of the victim's own energy.

Here are three such weapons that peacefully make their way through the victim and manage to cause immense damage slowly and gradually...

Weapon#1 Tolerance

This is indeed the funniest weapon of all. That's because this weapon needs nothing but to let the opponent keep on attacking. High levels of tolerance can not only end all the aggression in the others but also leave them in a vulnerable condition because of excessive tiredness. This is commonly witnessed in combat fighting matches like boxing or wrestling, where boxers keep on taking punches till the opponent gets tired and then make their knock-out hit. However, in practical life; knock-out punches aren't really required. All what you need to do is develop good stamina and wait till the hardships give-up. Such victories are really worth celebrating and ultimately leave behind; no hard feelings in anyone.

Weapon#2 Addiction

Another very strange kind of peaceful weapon is addiction. In this case; interestingly, the victim actually enjoys the attack. Serving someone something which they badly need; might seem benevolent on the first glance. But it can turn out to be a really painful experience when that same thing is suddenly taken away from them. This often leads to intense depression in the victims and can even result into suicidal levels of torture. Also, victims easily get ready to go to any extent for getting back what they were set addicted to.

Moreover; logically, it doesn't even seem wrong as all what you did was taking away something that was as such not belonging to the victim.

Weapon#3 Ignorance

Surprisingly, though ignorance about the potential threats doesn't completely solve the problem; however it manages to keep you happy and content enough till the end. This works really very well with those problematic people or situations of life; which don't have any solution. Being unaware or believing that the problem doesn't exist; does half the job. Sometimes the knowledge of occurrence of something terrible; affects our psyche so much, that we're almost half dead before the problem actually begins and many times the supposed problem actually never appears!

In such cases; the ignorance truly becomes bliss. The weapon of ignorance works best during incurable diseases, fear of uncertainty and excess stress or tension about future of something or someone.